In 1980, Hot Off The Press President and owner Paulette Jarvey established a small business built on the foundation of family, friends and the success of one self-published book. Since then, Hot Off The Press has evolved into an award-winning publisher with over 800 products.

It literally began on her kitchen table. Paulette was raising a family while teaching classes on dough art at a community college. When her students urged her to write a “how-to” book, she was inspired, and Hot Off The Press was born!

Paulette recruited her family and friends to help with the creation of her first book “You Can Dough It!” The first press run sold out in just 60 days and motivated her to publish another book. She discovered a consumer demand for quality how-to craft books. Hot Off The Press responded to the demand and carved its niche. The company currently offers over 800 books on scrapbooking, kids' crafts, floral and bridal crafts, rubber stamping, decorative painting and more.

Hot Off The Press established itself as a leader in the craft market and became the only craft company to win 25 industry “Awards of Excellence for superior quality and design.”
